

LIFE'S A GAME

Life's a game, and we are all players in it, to paraphrase Shakespeare. And the best two cards in any hand are illustrated below—

First, the PAY ENVELOPE—Second, the BANK BOOK

Without the pay envelope there can be no bank book. Without the bank book the pay envelope is robbed of its FULL VALUE. The BANK BOOK is the logical, sensible supplement of the PAY ENVELOPE. Do You Hold These Winning Cards?

We all run races with rainbows and get mad with the world because we can't persuade it that we were doing it "just for exercise."

MEAT PRODUCTION

Increasing in United States, but Not Keeping Pace with Growth in Population.

The meat production has not kept pace with the increase in population and that its failure to do so, combined with increased cost of production and diminished purchasing power of the money unit, has contributed to higher prices, not only in the United States but all over the world, is stated in Part I of the exhaustive report on the meat situation in the preparation of which specialists of the department have been engaged for some time. This country, it is said, is participating in a world-wide movement, and it is not expected that the situation will undergo any radical change in the immediate future. On the other hand, it is believed that there will be a gradual growth and expansion in the world's production of beef, mutton, and pork which may or may not equal the rate of increase of the meat-eating population.

In America this gradual expansion appears to have begun already. Between 1907 and 1913 there was a marked decline in the number of cattle in the country, but in the last two years this not only has stopped but has given way to a perceptible increase. The estimated number on farms and ranges on January 1, 1916, 61,441,000, is, however, still much below the corresponding figure for 1907, 72,534,000. With the exception of temporary checks due to losses from hog cholera, there has been in recent years a persistent increase in the production of swine. On January 1, 1916, the number in the country was estimated at 68,000,000, as compared with 58,200,000 in April, 1910. On the other hand, the number of sheep declined during this period from 52,500,000 in 1910 to 49,200,000 in 1916. As the increase, however, is not sufficient to offset the increase in cattle and swine, it may be said that the total production of meat in the United States is increasing, but that this increase is not yet proportionate to the growth in population.

The available supply of meat would be much greater if it were not for the enormous losses caused by disease and exposure. Since 1900 it is estimated that from 1,100,000 to 1,475,000 cattle have died each year from disease and from 600,000 to 1,500,000 from exposure. With sheep, the losses from disease have been about the same, but from exposure much larger. With swine the relative prevalence of hog cholera is perhaps the determining factor in the annual loss. In 1894 this was as low as 2,200,000, but in 1914 it amounted to 7,000,000. If these 7,000,000 hogs had been saved, it is said, they would have produced enough meat to furnish every family in the United States with 40 pounds of pork.

Despite these facts the United States remains the greatest meat-eating as well as the greatest meat-producing nation in the world. Approximately twice as much meat is consumed in this country as in Germany before the war, and the total normal consumption in Russia, Great Britain, and France is less than in Germany. The per capita consumption is also far greater in this country than anywhere else with the exception of Australia and New Zealand.

Our own exports now consist largely of pork and pork products, and these are derived to a great extent from corn. In the fiscal years 1914 and 1915 we imported more fresh, chilled, and frozen beef and mutton than we exported and more beef of all descriptions was imported in 1914 than was exported. In this limited respect we have joined the great majority. Practically the whole of the world's export trade in meat is maintained by nine countries—Argentina, Australia, Canada, Denmark, Mexico (under normal conditions), New Zealand, the United States, and Uruguay.

CLIPPINGS FROM THE SNAGTOWN TORCHLIGHT

J. F. Cross has bought a pocket-book to keep his money in, but now finds himself in as bad a fix as he was before, having spent all his money for the pocketbook.

No matter how warm it is in the summer time, you never observe a fly lighting on a cake of ice.

The pretty cover of a magazine sells many a copy of it, just as the fine garments of a woman will attract men.

Several friends bragged on Miss Margaret Isley's singing at the Frog Hill church last Sunday. If she gets many more compliments she will try to go on the stage at Snagtown.

A belled buzzard was seen in this locality one day this week. This bird has had Snagtown on his circuit for the past several seasons, and has many followers here.

At the Coon Holler school house Wednesday night the school teacher presented a powerful lecture on "World Wide Peace." He had a large and intelligent audience, which sat spellbound until about the middle of the discourse, when old Mart Lowery started a big dog fight just outside.

George Rye has spent the past week looking for his mule, which he suspicions was stolen from the sapling at the Frog Hill church last Sunday. As yet he has no clue, though he has asked at least a dozen men if they are guilty. He believes the crime was committed by Jack Goodine or a member of some other church.

A plug tobacco cutter has been installed in the store at Lazy Holler. The storekeeper, old "Dad" Schrenk, will practice on it this summer by chopping up watermelon rinds.

Another window is being cut in the blacksmith shop in Coon Holler. The reason it is so hot there every summer is because it takes all of the extra air around there to run the bellows.

Dr. J. Walter Smith, who spent a portion of last week trying to slip upon a crow near Rattlesnake Ford to get a shot at him, has got a longer gun and started out again this morning. He got several shots at the crow at long range, but each time the crow got wind of it and moved before the bullets got there.

Ben Murray left this morning for Possum Ridge. He took a picture frame along with him to stick his head through when he has his photograph made.

Patriotism should begin at the cradle and end at the grave. But with some people it begins at the pocketbook and ends at the same place.

Life is just one day after another until we reach the end, but the question of whether those days will be of sunshine or shadow rests entirely with us.

MR. DUFFY'S DEFEAT

One of the most encouraging signs lately in state politics is that Mr. H. C. Duffy has been forced to withdraw from the Congressional race in the Ninth district to save himself from an overwhelming defeat. Mr. Duffy not only had no chance to win the nomination, but there was said to have been an excellent prospect for Mr. Fields, the present Congressman, to have carried Harrison county, wherein Mr. Duffy resides.

Mr. Duffy was selected by Governor Stanley and the liquor oligarchy to represent them as Speaker of the last House, and his course during the Legislature was one of unmistakable loyalty to the influences that were responsible for his election.

While his arbitrary and defiant stand for the whisky and brewery interests aroused indignation throughout the state, Mr. Duffy said or did nothing at Frankfort which attracted so much attention as his voluntary statement that he "hadn't been to church in twenty-five years."

and had no respect for the priesthood or clergy."

Shortly after the Legislature adjourned Mr. Duffy, in a speech at Cynthiana, gave to the people of Harrison county an account of his stewardship at Frankfort, and his race for Congress was made upon the record he made as Speaker. His withdrawal is a matter of keen disappointment to many Democrats in the state who were anxious to learn just what the people of the Ninth district thought of that record. Everyone, of course, knows, however, that if Mr. Duffy had believed he had the slightest prospect of election he would have continued in the race.

In the meanwhile Mr. Fields will be renominated by a large plurality, and the priesthood and clergy of the entire state are still flourishing.—Elizabethtown News.
